

Homes with Hearts Wanted!

Seattle Humane Society is looking for 'Furry Nightingales' for Cats and Kittens

The Seattle Humane Society is filled to the brim with cats and kittens, some of whom have “kitty colds” and could really benefit from home care until they are ready for adoption into loving homes.

“Orphaned and abandoned cats are a community challenge. The Seattle Humane Society is happy to lead the charge to help them,” said CEO Brenda Barnette. “We are asking the community to help us meet that challenge and to give these orphaned cats and kittens the care they need and deserve.”

With the help of our volunteer heroes, during our last year fiscal year, 3,001 animals were given TLC in foster homes on their way to homes of their own.

If you have a spare room, garage or basement where these kitties can stay temporarily (away from your cats), and if you've always wanted an opportunity to be a “Furry Nightingale” and provide nursing care for fabulous feline friends, please call our Cat Foster Coordinator at (425) 373-5380 or email ashley@seattlehumane.org.
